
ing of a religious character will enter into the ceremonies. It has been decided that the procession will only accompany the corpse to the city limits. Chief of Police Ebersold says no special police arrangements have yet been made, regarding the proposed demonstration. He understands "It is not to be a red flag affair." The Central Labor Union members say they will carry the regulation banners of the various societies composing the organization. Should they do so there will be no absence of red flags for the societies and their 12,000 members are almost without exception radically

...ealistic, and their hunting is of a most vivid crimson. Each society is providing itself with a band of music for the occasion.
Sheriff Matsor today decided that Neales

A FIRE PANIC.

Children Injured During an Enter-

DUBUQUE, Ia., March 10.—There was a panic here last evening, in a theatre where over 700 school children were gathered to witness an entertainment. Shortly after the performance commenced, some person raised the cry of "fire," and a terrible scene at once ensued. The frightened children rushed for the doors, blocking up the passage ways pushing blindly one over the other. Prof. Fish of the third ward school, and a number of others near the door, tore down a partition, opened doors and broke the windows. They seized the children, throwing them right and left, and by extraordinary efforts succeeded in clearing the passages. A number of children were injured, but none seriously.

THE LAST CONGRESS.

Representative Reed Sizes It Up.

In summing up the achievements and failures of the XLIXth Congress, especially the House of Representatives, Mr. Reed Maine said to a Tribune correspondent: "The XLIXth Congress has failed to do most important work. I perceive that those who are thankful for little are trying by the unmerited in separate lines of a number small things to make a catalogue which will show quantity if not quality. If the country is disposed to felicitate itself over

Presidential succession bill, which gave the President a power of attorney to choose a successor and substituted the possibility of Bayard for the possibility of Sherman; or for the Presidential count bill which provides for a contingency as liable to happen again as lightning to strike twice in the same place; or over the inter-state commerce bill, announced uncertainty that any nation can stated—the country must be very easily satisfied. If the country will pause and reflect and summon to its recollection the memory of what was expected of this Censused when it began, it will find that of the three great measures which were then deemed of importance, every one is still in the future. These measures were reduction of the surplus, defence of the country and admission of three States in the great Northwest. In the House of Representatives, not one of these measures has received even consideration, not one of them has risen to the dignity of a debate. Not even eloquence has been bestowed on them. Our

See Mr. Morrison with his column march up a hill and then marched down; twice. Randall with his contingent could have seen with good glasses making time on that seemed to be a bill until he faded from vision behind a long letter which, understandably, marks him as the most acute man of this or any age. Meanwhile the surplus remains. Of course the Administration will now have to buy bonds and worry the banks or hoard and worry the entry. It is strange how much reformers like incapacity. The great call for formations and great guns did not have its men in various cabinet positions. Under the thoughtless leadership of the President, the economic condition of this country. The Democratic newspapers vied with the Republicans in reiterating his demand. Yet the House of Representatives with a contemptuous disregard of the needs of the country gave no fortification or ordnance bill for either session. And the country remains not only without guns, but without the capacity and appliances to make them. It must be fifteen months before another appropriation bill can pass. It will take two years to build an eight-inch and four to build a sixteen-inch gun. Hence we close the the 11th Congress with no gun for a fortification possible for more than three years. Mr. Randall, in the explanation he caused to be given of his failure, thought he could have agreed to do something if he had had more. As Mr. Cutcheon pointed out, he had had the Senate bill nine months. The truth is he didn't want time, but eternity. And the war had not yet got in. The truth is the whole Democratic party—both wings—were struggling to increase the surplus by reining needed expenditures, so that they may make a flank attack on protection. They are not willing to meet the question openly and will shout "down with the surplus."

then they mean "down with the tariff." The refusal to admit the three great Territories was a denial of the right of local self-government to 800,000 American citizens, who have made a great empire in the Northwest. So far from being able to justify its action in this matter the House never dared vote on the question. So flagrant was the injustice that no one dared to face it. The reason was not only obvious, but it was stated in full House and not denied. It was because the House feared that the votes of the States would be Republican.

I have no time to talk to you about the appropriations, but I am told they will be as ago in total as those of last session, which exceeded the three preceding years by an average of $45,000,000 and this notwithstanding the failure of the deficiency bill and the rer and harbor. Decidedly, if anybody shes to be happy over the last Congress, it must be over the House end of it."
